Lions

The lion is the second largest living cat after the tiger and usually, the lion is known for its extremely long neck and mane. A lion's mane is made of hair and grows on the sides and top of its head and neck.

The lion is faster than the tiger. The mane of the adult male lion, unique among cats, is one of the most distinctive characteristics of the species and it makes the lion appear larger.

Lions spend much of their time resting and are typically fed about 100 hours per day. They spend an average of two hours a day walking and 10 minutes resting.

Lions are the most social of big cats, living in groups called prides. Prides usually consist of one or two adult males, several females and their cubs. The males are usually larger and spend less time resting and more time hunting for the females to mate with.

Lions hunt by stalking their prey through tall grass or the savanna bush in heat-seeking and social hunting, which have been compared with grooming in primates. Most hunting happens at night. A lion's roar is heard up to 100 kilometers away. A lion's roar is heard up to 100 kilometers away.

Lions have the loudest roar of any big cat. Lions can roar for a long time, usually starting with a low deep, long note that built up into a series of shorter notes. They roar when they are angry, when they are hungry, when they are playing, when they are resting, when they are mating.

Adult giraffes stand 5 to 6 meters tall, with males taller than females. Located on both sides of the head, the giraffe's large, bulging eyes give it great all-around vision from its great height. Giraffes can be spotted and their colors of brown and white are also helpful. Giraffes also have the ability to close its nostrils to protect against sandstorms and sun.

A giraffe can see dark patches in patches. These usually can be orange, yellow, red, brown or black in color, separated by light hair. Each individual giraffe has a unique coat pattern. The pattern covers the entire body, making it so hard to see in the light and shade patterns of savanna woodlands.

Giraffes feed on leaves, twigs, shrubs, grass and fresh and dry grass. They feed at its highest during the first and last hours of daylight. When it is dark, giraffes may feed from the back of bushes. Although herbivores, giraffes have been known to catch termites and eat their feces.

Giraffes typically live up to 15 years in the wild. Because of their size, upright and powerful necks, which giraffes are not a targeted prey. However predators include lions, leopards, spotted hyenas and wild dogs. The predators can see for a distance in giraffes when they bend down to drink.

Winter Weather: Snow and Blizzards

"Whoa hoo! Snow day!" "No School!"

Sometimes, you hear this type of conversation. If you live in a climate that has cold snowy days, then you may have said this very thing before! If it's snowing, then we are in the season of winter! You'll be sure to dress in warm layers and sit by a fireplace. If you see snow falling on the ground, pause to remember that it used to be clouds! Clouds that hold tiny particles of ice, until they fall from the sky as snowflakes.

Google.com says that snowflakes are a flake of snow, especially a feathery ice crystal, typically displaying delicate sixfold symmetry.

Some parts of the world never have snowy weather...or, even cold weather for that matter! With the exception of Antarctica, it stays warm mostly year-round in the earth's southern hemisphere. Countries like Argentina, Madagascar and New Zealand have warm comfortable weather almost every day. Even in the northern hemisphere, some places experience warm weather almost year-round.

In parts of the world where it snows in wintertime, it can be VERY COLD and VERY SNOWY. When weather gets to the point of being extreme, or dangerous, it is called, severe weather. A blizzard is an example of severe weather, and occurs when it has been snowing very hard, for a long time, and it is also very windy. If the cold winter weather becomes severe, and a blizzard is starting, you can turn on the news and see that it is best to stay inside your home, avoid the icy and snowy roads, and dress warmly if you must go outside!
